Fred Steinhagen, Sr. Of Mokena Passes To Great Beyond

Fred Steinhagen, Sr., well known and old-time resident of Mokena, answered the final summons following a brief illness at his home in Mokena, Sunday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock.

Mr. Steinhagen had been afflicted some time with dropsy and with leakage of the heart. He had only been confined steadily to his bed for about a week.

Carl Christian Frederick Steinhagen was born April 17th, 1852, at Hegenboeck, Neuburg, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany. In 1878 he immigrated to America, locating in Joliet. In 1882 he was united in marriage at Joliet with Miss Catherine Mews. To this union seven children were born, three sons and four daughters, now living.

The deceased resided in Joliet for a number of years, and was employed at the steel mills. After leaving Joliet, he located on a small farm east of Mokena, where he resided until 1919, when he sold the farm to Mr. Heiman, and located in the village of Mokena, buying the former Fleisner cottage.

The deceased is survived by his widow, three sons, four daughters, fifteen grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, at the Immanuel Lutheran church in Mokena, Rev. W. J. Kemnitz officiating. Burial took place in the St. Peter Lutheran cemetery at Joliet.

Tinley Park To Vote on School Site

A special election will be held Saturday night of this week for the purchase of a new school site. The purchase of four acres of land adjoining the Andres lots for the new school site is to be voted on. The question whether the present site is to be retained as a school site is also to be voted on. It is understood that the four acres in question can be purchased cheaper than for what the old property can be sold for. Those backing the new school feel that the most essential thing for the new school is to have an ample sized playground, as nothing else is more conducive to a good modern up-to-date school than to provide plenty of means of recreation for the children.

New Bill Would Change Presidential Primary Law

The latest of special interest in legislative matters to the people of the 41st Senatorial District is the introduction by Representative John L. Walker of Joliet of a bill in the Illinois Legislature providing for making the presidential primary law more effective by placing the selection of the delegates and alternates to the National conventions in the hands of the presidential candidate of each party who receives the largest number of votes at the presidential primary. The bill provides that any candidate for president may have his name placed upon the primary ballot upon petition of 1,000 qualified voters, and that no candidate's name shall appear upon the ballot without his formal consent, filed with the Secretary of State. The bill would shorten the primary ballot by omitting the names of delegates and alternates. The section dealing with the appointment of delegates is as follows:

"The candidate of each party for President so receiving the largest number of votes of the candidates of that party, shall, within not less than ten (10) days preceding the holding of the National convention for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President by that party, file with the Secretary of State his designation of delegates to the National convention of that party, as follows: Four delegates-at-large and four alternate delegates-at-large, who must all be residents of the State; and two delegates from and residing in each congressional district, and two alternate delegates from and residing in each congressional district.

"With the designation shall be filed the written consent to serve signed by each delegate and alternate delegate so named. In case of death, disability or other vacancy, another person shall be designated in like manner to fill the vacancy.

"Within five days after such filing, the Secretary of State shall cause notice to be given once in some paper published in the city of Springfield, and shall issue to each delegate and alternate delegate a certificate of his designation. These delegates and alternate delegates so designated and notified shall be the delegates for the State at large and for the respective congressional districts to the National convention of the party."

Mokena Couple Wed Half Century; Event Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. John Oestreich of Mokena, formerly of New Lenox, Ill., have passed the fiftieth milestone in their wedded life, and in commemoration of this event, a celebration was held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Tuesday.

At noon a dinner was served, the guests being their son, Theodore Oestreich and family of Joliet, their daughters, Mrs. Hugh Deadmore and husband, Mrs. Wm. Semmler and family, Felix Moyer of Naperville, Clifton Deadmore of Chicago and Mrs. Wm. Kettner of Joliet.

As favors at the dinner were nut cups, covered with gold leaf, bearing the dates, 1873-1923. A beautiful bouquet of roses, a gift from the honored couple's daughter, Mrs. Wm. Campbell of Denver, Col., served as a center piece.

Mr. and Mrs. Oestreich were completely surprised. They received quite a number of gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Oestreich were married March 27th, 1873, at Naperville, Ill. The latter is the only one of a family of twelve children that had the rare privilege of celebrating her golden wedding anniversary. Mrs. Oestreich was born and raised in Naperville, while Mr. Oestreich is a native of Hessen Darmstadt, Germany.

Both are well advanced in years, but have been able to enjoy good health, and are yet quite active.

Mokena Water Works Inspected

The past week a representative of the Illinois Inspection Bureau, with offices in Chicago, called on the village board and made a thorough examination of the village water department, mains, fire protection, etc. He stated his Bureau had not known of the extension of the water mains here a few years ago, nor of the new well and pumping equipment. This improvement in the matter of fire protection will mean a reduction of 3 to 4 cents per $100 on insurance rates in the village, it is understood. It was recommended that Mokena should have a fire siren or other fire alarm. At present the village has no fire alarm of any kind.

This representative was also in Frankfort, and reported an excellent fire department and fire alarm siren.

Mokena Farmer Has Nature Freak

A nature freak on the farm of Herbert Cooper, north of Mokena, created much interest and curiosity, Monday, when a calf was born with two heads, four eyes, two mouths, two ears. The body was perfectly normal. The animal was born dead.

This freak of nature brought many people to the Cooper farm. Mr. Cooper cut its freak heads from the animal's body and brought it to town Monday. Later he took it to a taxidermist in Joliet to have it mounted.

Fred Francis, New Lenox Gets Record Price For Beeves

Fred Francis, well known cattle and sheep man of New Lenox, Ill., sold baby beeves at the highest price paid for that class of cattle on the Chicago market, March 20th, when his offering cashed at $10.00 per hundred-weight. They were Hereford heifers, the thirty-three head averaging 647 pounds each. They came from the Highland Hereford Breeders' Association in Texas. Mr. Francis bought them at an Illinois sale of these cattle last fall, at a price per head which is somewhat less than half of the gross selling price.

Mr. Francis was elated over the returns from his feeding venture, and gained the added distinction of getting the best price which has been reported for this class of stock this Spring at the Chicago market. Those who are acquainted with his skill as a stockman will not be surprised with this latest success. The "Whiteface babies" were fed in the usual manner, and were good gainers as well as good sellers, bringing around $1.00 per hundredweight more than any other sale of heifers reported.

The road north of Mokena, in front of the George Marti farm, was about the worst piece of road in the country. Autos got stalled there frequently. Last week this road was dragged, which made it some better, but it is still difficult to pass over with an auto.

Frankfort Oil Fire Seen Many Miles

Frankfort was on the map for a short time Sunday morning, when neighboring cities and towns thought Frankfort was on fire, when a great black cloud of smoke was seen in the vicinity of Frankfort. Telephone calls came over from Blue Island asking whether Frankfort was afire. The cause of the heavy smoke was a large quantity of oil in a ditch along the M. C. tracks, east of town, burning. A few weeks ago a tank car of oil was tipped over in the ditch during a wreck and the oil flowed in the ditch. As the ground was frozen, the oil could not soak in the earth, consequently it remained standing in the ditch, and caught fire in some unknown manner, Sunday morning. No damage was done.

NOT DAMAGED BY FIRE

As will be seen by reading over the Lyric and Grand programs, the recent fire in the Grand theatre block did no damage to the theatre interior, Saturday's and Sunday's performances being uninterrupted. VI—Continued.

"Oh," she said, "we have a little secret. Can't we have a secret if we want one?"

"Upon my word," Dwight commented, "she has a beautiful secret. I don't know about your secrets, Lulu."

Every time that he did this, that fleet, lifted look of Lulu's seemed to bleed.

"I'm glad for my dinner," remarked Monona at last. "Please excuse me."

On that they all rose. Lulu stayed in the kitchen and did her best to make her tasks indefinitely last. She had nearly finished when Di burst in.

"Aunt Lulu, Aunt Lulu!" she cried. "Come in there—come. I can't stand it. What am I going to do?"

"Di, dear," said Lulu. "Tell your mother—you must tell her."

"She'll cry," Di sobbed. "Then she'll tell papa—and he'll never stop talking about it. I know him—every day he'll keep it going. After he scolds me it'll be a joke for months. I'll die—I'll die, Aunt Lulu."

Ina's voice sounded in the kitchen. "What are you two whispering about? I declare, mamma's hurt, Di, at the way you're acting."

"Let's go out on the porch," said Lulu, and when Di would have escaped, Ina drew her with them.

It was a warm dusk, moonless, windless. The sounds of the village street came in—laughter, a touch at a piano, a chiming clock. Lights started and quickened in the blurred houses. Footsteps echoed on the board walks. The gate opened. The gloom yielded up Cornish.

Lulu was inordinately glad to see him. To have the strain of the time broken by him was like hearing, on a lonely winter morning, the clock strike reassuring dawn.

Cornish, in his gentle way, asked about the journey, about the sick woman—and Dwight talked of her again, and this time his voice broke. Di was curiously silent. When Cornish addressed her, she replied simply and directly—the manner of Di's answers—in fact, in a manner at all, Lulu spoke not at all—it was enough to have this respite.

After a little the gate opened again. It was Bobby. In the besetting fear that he was leaving Di to face something alone, Bobby had arrived.

And now Di's spirits rose. To her his presence meant repentance, recantation. Her laugh rang out, her replies came archly. But Bobby was plainly not playing up. Bobby was, in fact, hardly less than grim. It was Dwight, the irrepressible fellow, who kept the talk going.

"Mamma!" Monona shouted from her room. "Come and hear me say my prayers!"

Monona entered this request with precision on Ina's nastiest moments, but she always rose, unabashed, and went, motherly and dutiful, to hear devotions, as if that function and the process of living ran their two divided channels.

She had dispatched this errand and was returning when Mrs. Bett crossed the lawn from Grandma Gates', where the old lady had taken comfort in Mrs. Bett's ministrations for an hour.

"Don't you help me," Mrs. Bett warned them away sharply. "I guess I can help myself yet awhile."

She gained her chair. And still in her momentary rule of attention, she said clearly:

"I got a joke. Grandma Gates says it's all over town Di and Bobby Larkin eloped off together today. He!" The last was a single note of laughter, high and brief.

The silence fell.

"What nonsense!" Dwight Herbert said angrily.

But Ina said tensely: "Is it nonsense? Haven't I been trying and trying to find out where the black satchel went? Di!"

Di's laughter rose, but it sounded thin and false.

"Listen to that, Bobby," she said. "Listen!"

"That won't do, Di," said Ina. "You can't deceive mamma and don't you try!" Her voice trembled, she was frantic with loving and authentic anxiety, but she was without power, she overshadowed the real gravity of the moment by her indignation.

"Mrs. Deacon—" began Bobby, and stood up, very straight and manly before them all.

But Dwight intervened, Dwight, the father, the master of his house. Here was something requiring him to act. So the father set his face like a mask and brought down his hand on the rail of the porch. It was as if the sound shattered a thousand filaments—where?

"Diana!" his voice was terrible, demanded a response, ravened among them.

"Yes, papa," said Di, very small.

"Answer your mother. Answer me. Is there anything to this absurd tale?"

"No, papa," said Di, trembling.

"Nothing whatever?"

"Nothing whatever."

"Can you imagine how such a ridiculous report started?"

"No, papa."

"Very well. Now we know where we are. If anyone hears this report repeated, send them to me."

"Well, but that satchel—" said Ina, to whom an idea manifested less as a function than as a leech.

"One moment," said Dwight. "Lulu will of course verify what the child has said."

"If you cannot settle this with Di," said Lulu, "you cannot settle it with me."

"A shifty answer," said Dwight. "You have a genius at misrepresenting facts, you know, Lulu."

"Bobby wanted to say something," said Ina, still troubled.

"No, Mrs. Deacon," said Bobby, low. "I have nothing—more to say."

In a little while, when Bobby went away, Di walked with him to the gate. It was as if, the worst having happened to her, she dared everything now.

"Bobby," she said, "you hate a lie. But what else could I do?"

He could not see her, could see only the little moon of her face, blurring.

"And anyhow," said Di, "it wasn't a lie. We didn't elope, did we?"

"What do you think I came for tonight?" asked Bobby.

The day had aged him; he spoke like a man. His very voice came gruffly. But she saw nothing, softened to him, yielded, was ready to take his regret that they had not gone on.

"Well, I came for one thing," said Bobby, "to tell you that I couldn't stand for your wanting me to lie today. Why, Di—I hate a lie. And now

"And anyhow," said Di, "it wasn't a lie. We didn't elope, did we?"

"What do you think I came for tonight?" asked Bobby.

The day had aged him; he spoke like a man. His very voice came gruffly. But she saw nothing, softened to him, yielded, was ready to take his regret that they had not gone on.

to Ninian's letter. "An epistle from my dear brother Ninian." The words failed, as he saw the unsealed flap.

"You opened the letter?" he inquired incredulously. Fortunately he had no climax of furious calm for high occasions. All had been used on small occasions. "You opened the letter?" came in a tone of no deeper horror than "You picked the flower"—once put to Lulu.

She said nothing. As it is impossible to continue looking indignantly at some one who is not looking at you, Dwight turned to Ina, who was horror and sympathy, a nice half and half.

"Your sister has been opening my mail," he said.

"But, Dwight, if it's from Ninian"

"It is my mail," he reminded her. "She had asked me if she might open it. Of course I told her no."

"Well," said Ina practically, "what does he say?"

"I shall open the letter in my own time. My present concern is this disregard of my wishes. Why did you do it?"

Lulu smiled faintly and shook her head.

"Dwight," said Ina, reasonably, "she knows what's in it and we don't. Hurry up."

"She is," said Dwight, after a pause, "an ungrateful woman."

He opened the letter, saw the clipping, the avowal, with its facts.

"A-ha!" said he. "So after having been absent with my brother for a month, you find that you were not married to him."

Lulu spoke her exceeding triumph. "You see, Dwight," she said, "he told the truth. He had another wife. He didn't just leave me."

Dwight instantly cried: "But this seems to me to make you considerably worse off than if he had."

"Oh, no," Lulu said serenely. "No. Why," she said, "you know how it all came about. He—he was used to thinking of his wife as dead. If he hadn't—hadn't liked me, he wouldn't have told me. You see that, don't you?"

Dwight laughed. "That your apology?" he asked.

She said nothing.

"Look here, Lulu," he went on, "this is a bad business. The less you say about it the better, for all our sakes—you see that, don't you?"

"I want the people to know the truth," Lulu said.

"But it's nobody's business but our business! I take it you don't intend to sue Ninian?"

"Sue him? Oh no!"

"Then, for all our sakes, let's drop the matter. Tell you, Lulu, here are three of us. Our interests are the same in this thing—only Ninian is our relative and he's nothing to you now. Is he?"

"Why, no," said Lulu in surprise.

"Well, let's have a vote. Your sharp judgment is to tell his disgraceful fact broadcast. Mine is, least said, soonest mended. What do you say, Ina—considering Di and all?"

"My poor, poor sister!" Ina said. She struck together her little plump hands. "Oh, Dwight—when I think of it: What have I done—what have we done that I should have a good, kind, loving husband—be so protected, so loved, when other women. . . . Darling!" she sobbed, and drew near to Lulu. "You know how sorry I am—we all are."

Lulu stood up. Her white shawl slipped to the floor. Her hands were stiffly joined.

"Then," she said, "give me the only thing I've got—that's my pride. My pride—that he didn't want to get rid of me."

They stared at her. "What about my pride?" Dwight called to her, as across great distances. "Do you think I want everybody to know my brother did a thing like that?"

"You can't help that," said Lulu.

"But I want you to help it. I want you to promise me that you won't shame us like this before all our friends."

"You want me to promise what?"

"I want you—I ask you," Dwight said with an effort, "to promise me that you will keep this, with us—a family secret."

"No!" Lulu cried. "No, I won't do it! I won't do it! I won't do it!"

It was like some crude chant, knowing only two tones. She threw out her hands, her wrists long and dark on her blue skirt.

"Can't you understand anything?" she asked. "I've lived here all my life—on your money. I've not been strong enough to work, they say—well, but I've been strong enough to be a hired girl in your house—and I've been glad to pay for my keep."

Well, then I got a little something, same as other folks. I thought I was married and I went off on the train and he bought me things and I saw the different towns. And then it was all a mistake. I didn't have any of it. I came back here and went in to your kitchen again—I don't know why I came back. I s'pose because I'm most thirty-four and new things ain't so easy any more—but what have I got or what'll I ever have? And now you want to put on to me having folks look at me and think he run off and left me, and having 'em all wonder. . . . I can't stand it. I can't stand it. I can't. . . ."

"You'd rather they'd know he fooled you, when he had another wife?" Dwight sneered.

"Yes! Because he wanted me. How do I know—maybe he wanted me only just because he was

"Since the Tut-Ankh-Amen affair," said the attendant at the Detroit Institute of Arts, "there has been a positive rush for Egyptian relics. Scarcely a person comes in here who does not make inquiries, and want to see what we have, and to express regret that we haven't more. I firmly believe that more people have assiduously read books and articles dealing with ancient Egypt since this Luxor affair than ever before."

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Veterans' Bureau to Be Investigated

WASHINGTON.—Charges of waste, extravagance, and mismanagement in the veterans' bureau will be the subject of a thorough inquiry this summer, under the senate resolution creating a special committee of three members empowered with authority to sit during the adjournment of congress.

The committee will be headed by Senator Reed (Rep., Pa.), who won the distinguished service medal as a major in the Three hundred and eleventh field artillery in the World war. The other members of the committee will be Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.), a member of the special committee which investigated the treatment of disabled ex-service men last year, and Senator Oddie (Rep., Nev.).

Senator Reed said the policy of the committee would be to work in harmony with Gen. Hines, appointed by President Harding to head the veterans' bureau, "as far as it is possible and consistent with a thorough investigation of the serious charges that have been made against the operation of the veterans' bureau."

The senate directed the committee "to investigate the leases and contracts executed by the veterans' bureau or the Treasury department, for vocational schools and hospitals, and for the purchase, rentals, and sales of real estate and supplies used or to be used, directly or indirectly, by the veterans' bureau, and the matters and conditions in the premises set forth, and to report their findings, together with recommendations for the improvement of such conditions, to the next regular sessions of congress."

It is set forth in the preamble that complaints are being made against alleged delay by the bureau in the adjustment of claims for the relief of disabled veterans, and that there has been great and needless delay in the construction of hospitals and in providing proper hospitalization, as a result of which unnecessary suffering exists.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the new director, announces his hearty cooperation.

American Flyer No Longer "Unknown"

NEARLY five years ago an airplane carrying two American officers swept over the German position northwest of Stenay on the Meuse river in France, and crashed to earth behind the enemy lines, both officers being killed. They were buried by the Germans.

After the armistice their graves were found, one marked with the name of Lieut. Dana E. Coates, the other with the legend "Unknown."

The graves were opened that these two might sleep with honored comrades in France, and the laundry mark "L. R. T." was the only possibility of identification found on the "Unknown," aside from the label on his uniform, showing it to have been made by a Rochester, N. Y., firm. Through that slender clue, the War department has announced the unknown had been positively identified as Lieut. L. R. Thrall, who was trained in the flying school at Austin, Texas.

The problem of identification was solved in this way:

Application was made to the Rochester firm. Yes, it had made the uniform. But it had made thousands just like it and sold them to 300 retail dealers over the country during the war. Each of these was asked by the graves registration service to search its records for a sale to an officer with the initials "L. R. T."

Finally a dealer in Austin, Tex., reported that Lieut. L. R. Thrall had purchased such a uniform February 8, 1918.

Back to France led the clue. The records of the first air depot in France were searched. They revealed the fact that the officer had been attached to the Eleventh aero squadron. Then it was comparatively easy to establish the fact that he had been killed by the enemy while in flight with Lieutenant Coates and had been buried by the enemy.

So now Lieut. L. R. Thrall, "Unknown," no longer sleeps with his comrades in France.

Thinking Over the President's Protocol

PRESIDENT HARDING'S proposed protocol will probably cause considerable hard thinking between now and December by members of congress. Certainly it will be widely discussed on platform and in the press.

The protocol submitted by President Harding just before congress adjourned, making the United States a member of the international court of justice under the league of nations, was definitely sidetracked until the next congress meets.

By a vote of 24 to 49 the senate rejected a motion offered by Senator King (Dem., Utah) to proceed to the consideration of his resolution to ratify the protocol. The vote, with a few exceptions, was along party lines and revealed an unexpected unity among the Republicans against action at that time.

In voting down the King motion the senate confirmed the judgment of the foreign relations committee to the effect that the time remaining before adjournment of the present congress was too short for the careful consideration which the protocol merited.

The irreconcilables, who have viewed the protocol, in spite of the reservations suggested by Secretary of State Hughes, as a device to take the United States into the league of nations "through the back door," were elated over the decision of the senate.

By the time this question is reached in the next session, they pointed out, the country will be on the eve of another presidential campaign, and they are confident that another "great and solemn referendum" will show the people as much opposed as ever to entering European entanglements.

Both sides expect to do considerable talking about the subject during the adjournment, in the expectation that public sentiment will manifest itself strongly one way or the other and force a showdown on international policy.

Doughboys Laden Like Motor Trucks

AMERICAN doughboys going into action in the World war amazed the French by throwing away every thing except fighting tools and stripping to their undershirts and breeches. It's no wonder, for the heaviest laden pack animal of the army is the doughboy himself. Inch for inch by size or pound for pound of his own weight the buck private of infantry carries on his back into battle double the burden handled by horses or mules or motor trucks. And he is expected to jog cheerfully along through the ooze beside the road, leaving the good going to the gas and animal transport.

Army experts are racking their brains for ways to cut down the doughboy's load. Exhaustive study has been given to war experience for that purpose. Through the American Legion and similar organizations efforts have been made to get the men who carried the infantry packs in France to suggest changes. But as yet it has been possible, it was said at the War department, to get only a few ounces of weight off the backs of the trudging infantry.

Experts figure that the average load for a foot soldier should not exceed 61 pounds. Yet under the present organization tables, "No. 3, rear rank," (the automatic rifleman in the infantry) must stagger along under about 133 pounds when fully equipped.

The bulk of the doughboy's load is fighting equipment. What he carries for his own bodily comfort has always been stripped down to the absolute minimum. Aside from his "iron rations," his blanket, overcoat, extra shoes, mess kit, canteen and his few essential toilet articles, the weight the infantryman packs has a grim purpose. The whole intricate business of war revolves around the doughboy and his rifle and bayonet.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES—dyes or tints as you wish

Almost a Monopoly.
"In the United States," remarked the man who can remember figures, "there are 12,357,000 motorcycles according to the automotive division of the federal Department of Commerce. Do you realize what that means? I've done a little figuring and I ascertained that it means that out of every six motorcars operated in the world five of them are to be found within the United States of America. The world's motorcars total 14,622,000. About 2,000,000 of this number are trucks. In Europe, according to the same authority, motorcycles, without side cars, are taking the place of the low-priced car. Over there are more than 680,000 motorcycles, about three times as many as are registered in this country."

Scotch Herring Out of Business.
It looks as if the old-time Scotch herring had gone out of business entirely. The old fishing grounds of the North sea in the vicinity of the Scotch coast, which were once reeking with these fish, which were caught in great quantities by the fishermen of that country, have been entirely depleted recently, and the fishermen are without any livelihood. Thousands of them were dependent upon the herring fishing industry. The departure of the fish has been attributed to a recent change in the currents of the sea, which has probably driven the fish to some other point, and just where it has not yet been discovered.

A deposit of silica mineral of volcanic origin has been found in Czechoslovakia, which can be used directly in the manufacture of glass without the need of adding any of the other common ingredients used in making up the glass batch. Central Executive Committee Orders a Stay of Execution Pending Further Instructions—Prison Sentences for Others.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am taking it now for the Change of Life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter-box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives."—Mrs. ENGLEMAN, 2032 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N. Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Engleman. You should give it a fair trial now.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE STEP BEYOND

JUST a step beyond the barriers which have so long defied us, and we are sure of our ground, certain of realizing our fondest hopes, and marching on and on with the victors.

The thought thrills us with elation, but how hard it is to make the final stride when we are worn and weary. Human nature is prone to lose courage when the chase is tiresome.

It inclines to become disheartened when carefully worked out plans and calculations fall immediately to produce anticipated results.

The fatal fault with most of us is lack of patience, coupled with an inclination to be governed by impulse rather than reason at the turning moment when everything is dependent on calmness and firmness of purpose.

We incline to haste when we should go slowly and take accurate account of our energy, where we should conserve it, that our minds may not be filled with fear and finally overcome with sickening apprehension.

In business, as in love, most of our miserable failures result from our refusal to consider seriously the step beyond.

For some paltry reason, a whim of the fancy, or a laxity of activity, we find ourselves at the crucial moment weary of the chase.

So we sit in the inviting shade of a friendly nook, while our more ambitious rivals steal a march upon us and capture the prize, only a step beyond our impatient reach.

The blame is our own. But the truth never penetrates our souls until the clear perspective of years gives us a sharper vision which enables us to see our folly.

It is not until then that we fully understand our shortcomings.

To make amends for our own deficiencies, we proceed to pass around advice to our intimates, which, as a rule, falls on barren ground. They know us!

There is but a step between success and failure, likewise but a step between hope and despair. When the occasion comes for action very few of us, alas, know how to make the step, though it is inviting and has an air of simplicity.

And yet there is probably no other movement more vitally important to man's future success than the step just beyond.

CLAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A MAN, they say, is made of clay; Undoubtedly it's true. But then one finds so many kinds Of clay—now haven't you? Along the creeks are yellow streaks Of clay that wouldn't do.

I know the mushy sort of slush Would never make a man; He'd fall apart before you start, Would crumble in the pan. That's not the ditch of clay in which Humanity began.

And in the yard is clay so hard, So shriveled up and dry, So rough and cold with musty mold And full of alkali. No love nor wit could soften it— You wouldn't even try.

But there is clay beside the way That's solid yet will bend, That gives and takes—the kind that makes

A fellow and a friend, That, once you choose, you never lose, That holds until the end.

So don't begin with clay too thin, Nor start with clay too thick, The plastic kind you'll always find The best to do the trick.

Just add a hand of good, old sand— And then you'll have a brick!

up a little higher. If you have done one job well, find a tougher job, and do that better.

That is what makes progress, and progress is necessary to the prosperity and happiness of every human being just as it is necessary to the prosperity and happiness of the whole human race.

There will be plenty of hurdles to take. But when you have taken one make ready for another. For success is just one hurdle after another, and the man who takes them as they come is the man who wins out.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because —

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

YOU LIKE TO ARGUE?

You may be a bore or you may not with this propensity. Yet if you control it well you are a stimulating person to have about. Nothing is better for a crowd of lazy-minded folk than to have such as you around. You can argue on whether the moon has flowers, or rocks have life, or babies have rights, or women have hearts, or anything but politics and religion and still be popular and amusing. Argument and discussion can be the pep of a party if no one gets huffy.

Better Vision.

Upon retiring, as she seemed very wide awake, I told my little girl to close her eyes and count the sheep going over the fence. She closed her eyes tightly. A little later I glanced at her and she had her eyes wide open, looking up at the ceiling. I said: "Patricia, I thought I told you to close your eyes and count sheep?" "I can see them better with my eyes open," she replied.—Chicago Tribune.

A FAIRY STORY

"Pa, what is a fairy story?" "One that ends with 'so they were married and lived happily ever after.'"

Mother's Cook Book

The man who holds down the ladder at the bottom is frequently of just as much service as the man at the top. The mother in the home who is faithful to her duties is as invaluable as the breadwinner outside.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

A NICE little company sandwich which is different, and served with a cup of cocoa or coffee will be enough for light refreshments is Chicken Salad Rolls.

Mix one cupful of cooked chicken, one cupful of chopped celery and one-half cupful of chopped green olives with three tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing, seasoning lightly with salt and cayenne. Cut small rolls into halves, remove the soft centers, spread with softened butter and fill with the salad; press the halves together or serve open with the tops garnished to suit the taste.

For the Cooky Jar.

Take one cupful of shortening, two cupfuls of sugar, two eggs, one cupful of milk, three and one-half cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of flavoring, a little salt and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix, chill and roll as thin as possible. Sprinkle the tops with sugar just before going into the oven. For variety cut with a doughnut cutter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and add three halves of almonds, points to the center at equal distances. These are called sand tarts.

Raisin Butter Sandwiches.

Soften butter by working it with a spatula or wooden spoon until creamy. To one-half cupful of butter add one-half cupful of finely chopped raisins and two tablespoonfuls of finely-minced candied ginger. Mix, and when of the right consistency spread on buttered bread. Serve with afternoon tea.

Porcupine Apples.

Select apples of uniform size and which will cook tender without losing their shape. To half a dozen apples prepare a sirup in which to cook them. When tender decorate with quartered blanched almonds, sticking them into the apple as thick as desired. Pour the sirup around the apples and bake until the nuts are lightly browned. Serve as dessert with cream. The centers may be filled with bright colored jelly and they may be arranged on a platter if desired, with a spoonful of cream whipped stiff on each.

LESSON FOR APRIL 1

THE WALK TO EMMAUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen.—Luke 24:5-6.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matthew 28:1-10; Acts 2:22-35; I Corinthians 15:3-20; Colossians 3:1-4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Walk With Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus as a Companion.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Life With the Risen Lord.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Christ's Resurrection Means.

I. The Walk of Two Discouraged Disciples (vv. 13-15).

Emmaus was seven and one-half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why they were walking this way we do not surely know. Perhaps their home was there, or they were merely walking to seek relief from their stunning sorrow. If they had believed what Jesus told them about His death and resurrection they would have escaped this great disappointment. Unbelief causes many heartaches and disappointments. One of these disciples was Cleopas, but the other is unknown. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. So little had His teaching about His resurrection impressed them that the reports which the women brought were as idle tales to them. If they had believed what He said about coming forth from the grave they would have been expecting to hear just such reports as were being circulated.

II. The Unrecognized Companion (vv. 16-24).

1. Who He Was. Jesus. While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days on this journey, Jesus joined them. Even when He questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize Him. Many times we are so taken up with our sorrows and disappointments that we do not recognize Jesus though walking by our side. How grieved He must be to be unrecognized as He walks by us in our sorrows and trials.

2. His Question (v. 17). Perceiving their sadness and perplexity He sought to help them by calling forth a statement of their grief. This question surprised them and caused them to infer that He was a stranger in Jerusalem. The condemnation and crucifixion of the great prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one they thought, who had lived in Jerusalem, could be ignorant of them. One valuable aspect of the unbelief of the disciples was that it revealed the fact that they were not credulous enthusiasts but hard to convince. Out of this incredulity developed the unshaken faith in the word of the resurrection.

III. The Scriptures Opened (vv. 25-35).

1. His Rebuke (v. 25). He did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures. They had accepted only such parts of the Old Testament as suited their notions. Men and women who do not believe all that the Scriptures say, especially about the work of the blessed Savior, are entirely blameworthy. The very center and heart of the Old Testament Scriptures is the death and resurrection of Christ. It is ignorance of the Scriptures and unbelief of the wonderful and complete redemption wrought by Christ that robs us of many joys, and power and efficiency as workers for Christ. Christ will be the teacher of all who will open their hearts unto Him.

2. Jesus Recognized (v. 31). While sitting at meat with the disciples their eyes were opened as they saw Him bless the bread and distribute it to them. We, too, can see the Lord on such common occasions as eating a meal if we have open eyes. Indeed we ought to see Him when eating, selling, buying and in our recreations for He has promised us His presence.

IV. The Effect Upon the Disciples (vv. 32-35). They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Savior that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of the word of His resurrection. Those who have had the Scriptures opened to them touching the death and resurrection of Christ cannot help but hasten to make it known to others.

Conciseness in Speaking.

Every man should study conciseness in speaking; it is a sign of ignorance not to know that long speeches, though they may please the speaker, are the torture of the hearer.—Felt-ham.

Like Old Watchers.

Persons extremely reserved are like old enameled watches, which had painted covers that hindered your seeing what o'clock it was.—Walpole.

The Secret.

What is mine, even to my life, is hers I love; but the secret of my friend is not mine.—Sir P. Sidney.

The Quarrel.

Beware of entrance to a quarrel but, being in, bear it that the opposer may beware of thee.—Shakespeare.

SAVED LIFE SAYS MRS. WAGENAAR

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 268 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well."

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away."

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now, I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Farm Problems.

Appetizing?

Cutting through the alley the late worker figured that he could just about reach the front door of the cafe before they closed. And, as he passed, he noticed a waiter coming to the alley door with a platter of remnant toast. He made the front door. They were not overglad to see him, but took his order. He asked for a club sandwich.

The waiter plodded to the rear, and pretty soon the customer heard the cook growling: "Say, where did you throw that toast?"

Possession of a deep bass voice is almost sure to prevent a man from speaking frivolously.

KING'S ROBE CHEST

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with Earl of Carnarvon. This beautiful painted chest, found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen of Egypt, contained the king's robes, decorated with elaborate bead and gold work of lapis-lazuli and turquoise; a gilt headrest like those used in Japan today, several pairs of sandals ornamented with inlaid gold, a black amber necklace, a collar of falcon and other objects. On the vaulted lid of the chest the scenes represent the king and his courtiers hunting lions, antelopes and other animals. On the two sides are battle scenes.

General Instructions To Bidders

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids for the furnishing, unloading, hauling, dumping and spreading of approximately 575 cu. yds. of 3-inch crushed stone, approximately 250 cu. yds. of 1½-inch crushed stone, and approximately 175 cu. yds. of screenings, on what is known as 175th street, will be received by the Highway Commissioner of Bremen Township, at the office of the Town Clerk, in the Village Hall at Tinley Park, Ill., until 2 o'clock p. m., SATURDAY, APRIL 7th, 1923.

Also sealed bids will be received at the time and place mentioned above for labor and teaming by the hour for grading, ditching and making embankments on 175th street, under the direction of the Highway Commissioner.

Only sealed bids will be considered.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

LOCATION

The location of the road upon which the improvement is to be made is as follows:

On what is known as 175th street, on section line between Sections 25 and 36, Bremen Township, extending from the east township line approximately ¼ mile in a westerly direction.

Average haul from Homewood, Ill., is approximately 2 miles. Deliveries can also be made from other nearby gravel pits or stone quarries.

Engineer's estimate, $4,000.00. Bids exceeding $9,000, if accepted, will have to be paid by anticipation warrants on the hard road fund of Bremen Township.

This job is being re-let on account of the last bids being in excess of the amount in the township's hard road fund. The width of the road to be improved has been reduced from 12 feet to 10 feet.

JOHN M. BETTENHAUSEN, Highway Commissioner, Bremen Township.
